CHATTANOOGA - Starting June 1st, Cherokee Truck Equipment (Cherokee Truck) headquartered in Chattanooga, TN will have a new mask policy for employees. Powered by Go Evo, a COVID screening app, employees will be required to self-screen daily and those that have provided their vaccination card will be allowed to enter without a mask.

But as states start to decrease guidelines, many are concerned with their personal safety while at work. "To ensure a "peace of mind" while at Cherokee Truck, we have implemented a daily self-screening process. Keeping in mind that our teams go home to their families each night, we wanted to ensure that everyone feels safe coming to work and returning home," stated human resource manager, Lydia Kindiger. The Go Evo app is updated with the most up to date CDC recommendations. It allows employees to take a CDC linked, self-assessment prior to entering the building by screening for COVID symptoms. "We chose Go Evo because it is not only easy to use, it tracks test results and vaccine status as well as offers a place to store documents," explained Kindiger.

While the Go Evo app offers another layer of safety to employees at Cherokee Truck, visitors will continue to have their temperatures taken, if they are entering beyond the front desk. "Despite the constant changes in policies and procedures, our teams have been patient and flexible. We have had very few COVID related issues and we have our teams to thank for that," stated Kindiger.
